Some Members of Congress have proposed giving Arizona state government control over national public lands, such as national forests, national monuments, and national wildlife refuges in its borders. The state government would decide the future management of the lands, but state taxpayers would pay all costs, including the cost of maintenance and preventing and fighting wildfires.

84% of Arizonans view the Colorado River as “at risk” – highest in the region. 84% support presidential authority for National Monument designation. 82% support treating wildfires as natural disasters in budgeting. 75% support continuing investment in LWCF.
